Stimulus plan may prove a windfall to health care! The Office of Health & Human Services estimates 244,000 new jobs by the end of 2010.

Hottest Job of 2010...

"we must also ensure that our hospitals are connected to each other through the internet.. every doctor's office is using cutting edge technology..."
- Obama - Dec. 2008

President Obama's controversial health care reform strategy may be responsible for creating the biggest boom in health care jobs in our lifetime. His 2007 bill "Wired for Health Care Quality Act" never reached a Senate vote. But Obama has been unrelenting in his commitment to support a comprehensive health care technology bill.

In his December 5, 2008 weekly radio address, President-Elect Barak Obama outlined the main features of his Economic Recovery Plan a key plank of which is improving the information superhighway. He said "we must also ensure that our hospitals are connected to each other through the internet. That is why the economic recovery plan I'm proposing will help modernize our health care system – and that won't just save jobs, it will save lives. We will make sure that every doctor's office and hospital in this country is using cutting edge technology and electronic medical records so that we can cut red tape, prevent medical mistakes, and help save billions of dollars each year."

True to his promise, on February 17th the President signed into law the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act that will invest billions of dollars to accelerate the adoption and use of health IT. This package includes $87 billion for helping with Medicaid costs and $20 billion for health information technology and another $20 billion for SCHIP projects related to health IT. This bill has been described by eHealth Initiative as the "most significant legislation ever to address health information technology."

The Office of Health & Human Services estimates a projected 244,000 jobs created in health IT by the end of the 4th quarter of 2010 and 821,000 jobs created through the aid to the States.

One health care chief information officer blogging on this subject in December 2008 tallied the jobs created when his hospital, Beth Israel Deaconess, recently computerized its health records department. Twenty-two new jobs were created in his facility. Extrapolated over the nation's health care providers he estimated tens of thousands of new jobs would be created by the stimulus package nationwide.

Simply Stated - All of a sudden health informatics will be HOT!

Pharmacists - Don't Bungle Your Next Job Change

As often as baby-boomers change jobs (average 10x according to the Department of Labor), you'd think they have mastered the game by now. The worker as a "free agent" remains a reality as on financier put it: "There are no final destinations...your career is a process." So it comes as a bit of a surprise that a recent study reveals that botching a job change is more common than finesse. Read on at PharmaCareers

It all happens in the first 60 seconds...

"A hiring manager makes a decisive qualification of a job candidate within the first 60 second of the time they meet."

What can be accomplished in 60 seconds:

You can...

- Convey an impressive "look." Strive to exceed all of his or her expectations and leave a long-standing first impression.
  - Exhibit your positive interpersonal skills. You want your interviewer to see you as the polite, professional, and confident person you are
  - Make a connection. You will attempt to make a personal connection with your interviewer that will facilitate a comfortable, positive, and advantageous interaction.
- Wow, this person looks even better than I had imagined.
  - Yes, I made a great decision bringing this person in for an interview (and I think I'm going to have a great new employee soon).
  - Whew, I may not have been absolutely sure before, but I am now; this is exactly the type of person I want on my team.

60 Seconds, a long time:

While the first sixty seconds can't replace the hard work of preparation prior to the interview, a lot can be accomplished in 60 seconds.

The time has come to meet your prospective employer, and if he or she is going to make a decision in the first 60 seconds of your first meeting you will want to influence that decision. You have the ability to determine the outcome of the first minute, and there is a lot of preparation to be done!

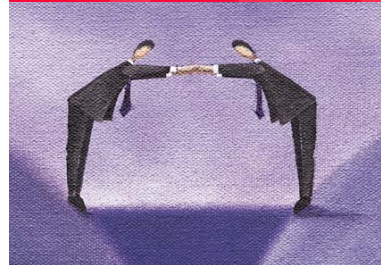

For more on how to ace the interview and make a great first impression, see The First 60 Seconds

The Objective:

The objective of the first look is to elicit a remarkable response from the interviewer, something on the order of - Wow! Yes! Whew!

Nuclear Openings

We have over 65 nuclear openings across the country in 22 states including some training opportunities (too many to list).

- We serve both large companies and independent nuclear labs
- We have built a solid network of relationships throughout the industry
- We represent nuclear pharmacists and their interests, not any particular company
- Most opportunities provide relocation expenses

Why not let us confidentially market you in the nuclear space and see what you're worth on the open market?

Our Unique Approach:

We work for pharmacists - not for any particular company. While you work your typical twelve hour shifts, we act as your agent to find the best opportunities available and to represent you with potential employers. Our services cost you nothing – and gain you the following:

- Industry relationships and expertise – we know your future boss
- Negotiation of salary and terms based upon our knowledge of industry issues
- Several competing company offers – ensuring that you get the best offer possible
- Career consultation, resume assistance, tailored process, comprehensive relo services.
